Annual Lecture Series 2014-15: Delhi

As part of IUDI lecture series, two lectures were organized on 1st August 2015 at India Habitat Centre.

Keynote lecture was given by Prof. Rahul Mehrotra, Chair-Urban Planning and Design, Graduate School of Design, Harvard University. The title of the lecture was ‘Mapping the Ephemeral Megacity’ and presented research findings of the KumbhMela, Allahabad carried out in 2013 by Harvard University.

Prof. Ranjani Mazumdar of JNU, New Delhi presented the second lecture ‘The Sound and Fury of Space in Contemporary Bombay Cinema’ with the help of an audio-visual presentation. The presentation focused on contemporary spatial navigations in the cinema of the 21st Century and showed the intersection of production design, aural excavations, architectural forms and fascination for old and new technologies, in the imagination of cinematic renderings of space.

The panel discussion was moderated by Prof. K.T. Ravindran and the event was attended by more than 100 IUDI members and students of architecture and urban design.

Urban Design for Urban Development National Workshop

IUDI collaborated with School of Planning and Architecture, New Delhi and All India Institute of Local Self Governance (AIILSG) and organized a one-day workshop on 14th February, 2015. This workshop was part of the ongoing 'Urban Dialogues' series of AIILSG.

Urban Design for Urban Development National Workshop

The following key aspects were covered through the workshop:

- Understanding of the City from the perspective of Urban Design
- Importance & role of Urban Design
- Urban Design for Local Areas and City Futures
- Urban Design as Public Policy

The papers at the seminar were presented by eminent professionals drawn from rich pool of IUDI and they shared mix of projects of different scales happening across the country such as Delhi, Ahmedabad, Pune, Patna, Manali along with academic presentations on the subject of urban

Urban Design for Urban Development National Workshop

The workshop offered an opportunity to share best practices and create a broader professional network along with exploring the value of multidisciplinary working, including the involvement of communities and wider stakeholders in creating better places to live.

The event was well attended by more than 50 participants and included representatives of State government departments, academics and research scholars, professionals and students apart from members of civil society.

Some of the important participants and speakers in the workshop included:

Prof. ChetanVaidya, Director- SPA Delhi,
Prof. (Dr.) P.S.N. Rao, Chairman-DUAC,
Mr. UjanGhosh, President-IUDI,

A watch tower, a bridge that rolls-over at every hour, a giant-wheel and a tram service along the river front. These are from among some of the initiatives proposed by a group of planning and architecture students at the Urban Design Studio Exhibition at the JNAFAU school of Planning and Architecture on Monday.

Dividing the Musi river front into seven zones, the group proposed as many as nine parks, a tram connectivity along the front, government schools, hotels, function hall, event park, multi-use facility, exhibition place, art and crafts workshop and sale point, low income groups' housing, a subway next to Afzalgunj bus station, a view tower, interpretation centre for explaining the heritage of buildings in the area and skywalk from Koti women's college among many more ideas.

Students exhibited their miniature models as part of an Urban Design Studio semester organised by the Institute of Urban Designers-India's AP chapter. The studio work involved extensive study and documentation and preparation of large scale study models that were reviewed by a panel of experts in the areas of urban planning, urban design, landscape design and transportation planning.
